How to delete a server on minehut

Last modified on April 30, 2021 in control panel By ApexHosting So, you are tired of your old and decrepit world and want some spices in your life? Perhaps the generation of the present world does not satisfy you? Or your friend accidentally blew it up, and you just want to start over. Whatever the reason, it can be a bit boring to reset the whole world. Today's guide will be on how to restore your Minecraft world and start again. So let's start. How to reset your world Method 1 – Change the world name The fastest way to reset your world is to change the world name in your Multicraft panel. It is recommended to change the name in something you will remember, such as adding a simple letter or number at the end of the original name. Make sure the server is disabled before making serious changes. Please pay attention to this method, as you can easily clutter server files with multiple unnecessary world files if you do this often. Stop the server with the red 'Stop' or 'Force Stop' button. Under the 'World' bar, change the name to everything you want, provided it is different from the name of the previous world. Click the 'Save' green button, and your world will be reset to a new seed with the old one that is still available in server files. (To access the old world again, just change the name back) Restart the server. This will load a new world. Method 2 – Eliminate the existing world A slower and more technical path allows deliberatelyany world file that you no longer want in the server files. By this method, you would go to server files and then delete any world you do not want, and after rebooting the server a new world would generate. Make sure the server is disabled before making serious changes. Stop the server with the red 'Stop' or 'Force Stop' button. Access server files with the FTP. Delete the existing file (the default name for a world file is 'world' but if you set a custom world name, it will be different) Restart the server. This will load a new world. Method 3 – Total annihilation So, let's say you didn't just want to reset the world, but you wanted to reset everything. This method will reset all server files entirely, from mods to whitelists and more. Don't do this unless you really want everything to go, along with a new start! Select the 'Reset Server Files' button. When required, type "reset" and select the green "Reset Server" button. Launch the server. This will load a new all. As a final warning, this option will completely wipe out every little bit of customization you have had on your server. All files will be restored to their original default state, then be careful! Common questions I deleted the world, but when I restarted the server it remained the same! If you tried to delete the world, but when you returned to the server nothing had changed, you most likely deleted something else. Whether your world file issomething beyond 'world' which is the default, then you are going to have to find and delete it correctly. There is also the case where they can be multiple files in the world if you have done Method 1 too many times, in this case you will have to delete some files in the world. This problem is simply caused by method 1 if the name messs you up when you delete the world file, so just keep erasing the world files until you have any more. Conclusions Now you know how to reset your Minecraft world like a pro! Sometimes, making technical changes like these would ensure some technical skills, but we have systems in place to make things easier for you. Changing your world for any reason will give you a new start and make sure you have a new area to explore to the content of your heart. With this saying, I hope you have a nice day! Start with your minecraft server in 5 minutes and start trying these great features. Home Minehut Help How to Delete a Home Minehut Server Help How to eliminate a server Welcome to the Minehut Meta GitHub repo! This is the place to report bugs and suggest features and improvements to Minehut, the server hosting network! You can also participate in conversations about feature requests and bug reports. We would like to improve communication with our users by providing official channels to report problems and tell us your ideas. This space will be taken as a (experimental) approach to see if you feel comfortable reporting and monitoring your problems fromof this instrument. This document (called README) will serve as a starting point to make the first number. General introduction Community aspects presenting a problem General introduction This is the Minehut Meta GitHub repository. Here, you can tell us your features and ideas you want to be added to Minehut and you can also report bugs that need to be crushed. We use the GitHub feature to monitor bug reports and feature requests (suggestions). We realized that you could not have much experience using GitHub, and that's okay! We will do our best to help you navigate this tracker. We can start by introducing some key terms that you will feel a lot: Problem: A request for functionality or bug reports. Repository or repo: Refused to the Minehut Meta page group. Includes the tracker and emission documents (like this). Bug: Any involuntary behavior on Minehut. Basically, if something doesn't work as it should, it's a bug. Valid: If a problem is correct. Reproducible? Correct information? Really a problem? Reproducible: If a bug report can be copied or induced by other people. A bug report must be reproducible to be valid. Now that you are an expert on the technical jargon we use to handle problems, you are a step closer to making your first problem! Community aspects We expect community members to participate in conversations here to act civilly and to maintain this productive and enjoyable forum. Users who violate the rules will betheir deleted messages and may be permanently banned from participation according to circumstances. Use the release templates provided Help the staff if required Contribute to current discussions Search the problem tracker to ensure that your problem has not already been presented before making a new post (use the search bar on the Problems page) Check the validity of your problem Be clear, concise and specific in your messages Keep talking about topics Be respectful to all Take advantage of GitHub Flavoured Markdown -- is impressive di Create a separate problem for each application/bug report of functionality (do not talk more in one problem) Don't Bump's problems just to receive an answer (all problems are recognized) Argue unproductively in Stray Off-topic Comments Try to get support for Minehut services here -- read this Ask for new plugins or plugin update here -- those belong to the forum category Use logical fallacies in arguments Recreate a problem you feel was unfairly closed -- if you feel a problem you feel free We can measure those:) Send a problem Important Important!
